Dear Parents,

Today is Act of Random Kindness Day and although we haven't focused on this in school. I have seen acts of kindness throughout today and this week. Our children are often so generous and thoughtful and an inspiration to the staff.

I hope that as we approach the half term break, you might receive or take part in an act of random kindness.

I have also been buoyed by the very special encouragement and support that was evident at the Ben Greenep Winter Run. What amazing and encouraging children we have in our school.

As you read this newsletter, I would like to draw your attention to World Book Day and two other club opportunities that you child may want to commit to.

I hope you all have a relaxing and positive half term break.

Dantastic – Fairy Tales

On the last day of this half term Reception Class and Year 1 have had the most wonderful experience building on their Fairy Tales work. They have had a spellbinding day fuelling the children's imagination and creativity. Thank you for your support for this day as it was truly exciting and very inspiring.

- There will be a bookstall (Usborne) at the beginning and end of the day for parents to come and, if you want, purchase a book. £1 World Book Day tokens can be used.
- 2:30pm – parents are invited to read and explore books as well as hear children read from 2:30pm until the end of the day. This will be in your child's class.

- Children are invited to 'get caught reading' over half term and bring in a picture of them reading in an interesting place or location.
- Matthew Sowerby will be joining us on the day to create poetry and share poetry with our children. Very exciting!

To start with, the club will run up until the 12th May, focusing on artwork related to King Charles III's Coronation. If the club is oversubscribed, we will look to continue it after these dates for those children who don't get a chance the first time around - this would be with a different topic, as it would be after the Coronation.
